Horses That Look Like Staff Members, Part 2

by: Marilee Spencer

Welcome to Issue Six! I hope you're having a lovely October so far! It's going by so quickly. I currently have four halloween costumes scheduled for this year and Grace and I are watching Carmilla on infinite repeat, so it's going pretty ok on our ends.

Tarot for the Fortnight

by: Beth

Nine of wands: Taking the worthy, heroic path isn't always glamorous and can feel like a total struggle at times. If you're faltering and worried you can't be true to your morals right now, see your challenges as steps in a ladder towards an even more awesome version of yourself. It's okay to be tired, to rest...but don't give up the good fight.

Dear Sour
by: Brittani

Q: Dear Sour,
How do you know if your girlfriend is faking it?
Sincerely,
Ballin' in Boston

A: Relationships are built on faking lots of things: empathy, interest, faith in love and/or humanity. Orgasms should not be one of them. The best way to figure this out is to STOP what you're doing when she begins to fake it. If she is trying to dupe you, she'll then be forced to do MORE acting to really sell that she is v. sad that you stopped when she was on the brink of climax and unless she is Meryl Streep, she probably won't be able to pull that off. I mean, can Meryl even pull off that kind of outrage?

If you were asking if your girlfriend IS the MTV teen dramedy, Faking It, then no. She's not.
