

A + BEE

Hi shamrocks!

Welcome back! We love you! It's Bee Day and I'm so glad to see you all here! Since we last met, Laura and Luna has become an international sensation (thanks, Heather!) and Chelsey bought some groceries. This issue is chock full of cats, I hope that is ok with you.

Tarot for the Fortnight

Five of Swords
You or someone you know might be feeling smug right now, but that victory came at a cost. If you find yourself in a 'battle' right now, let it go - winning is not worth the price. Better to lose than to be the person with an armful of sharp swords and no-one to help carry them.

CHOOSE YOUR OWN GAY-DVENTURE

You order the Intersectionaquiri and watch as the bartender mixes together 2 shots of white rum, one shot of fresh grapefruit juice, half a shot of fresh lime juice, and a quarter shot each of simple syrup and maraschino liqueur; shakes the ingredients for ten solid seconds; strains it into a chilled cocktail glass; and garnishes it with a grapefruit twist.

"To a rum of one's own," you say, accepting the drink and taking a delicious sip.

The bartender passes you a basket of fresh pretzel bites. "To Alice's Adventures in Wonder Bread," she says, and smiles a crooked smile that makes your stomach do a backflip.

Maybe this really is Wonderland. Why else are there so many attractive girls at this museum — and in the adjoining enchanted rooftop forest?

You're three sips into your intersectionaquiri and worrying less and less about being late for your interview when you hear a screech from the trees surrounding the woodland pub, followed by the thunder of a familiar drum. As the howl gets closer, you can make a chant that sounds an awful lot like: "ALL LIVES MATTER! ALL LIVES MATTER!"

"Rosie T. Riveter!" the bartender swears, rolling her eyes. "Men's Rights activists. Again. Look, you'd better go. This is going to get ugly."

You realize you could slip your new Invisibility Cloak over yourself, make a break for it, and still maybe make it to your interview on time. On time and maybe just a little bit drunk.

Or you could stay and join your bartender in the battle against these Men's Rights clowns.

DO YOU:

- + Go stealth and sneak back into the woods.
- + Guzzle the rest of your intersectionaquiri and prepared for battle.
